

Joe Johnson, P.E.

Senior Manager
Environmental Affairs
Cisco Systems

As senior manager for environmental affairs, Joe Johnson manages a global team of environmental professionals responsible for tracking, interpreting and implementing worldwide environmental regulations to ensure Cisco's compliance with global environmental mandates. He also leads activities under Cisco's EcoBoard, and represents Cisco in worldwide environmental trade and standards associations such as EICTA, ITI, AeA, iNEMI and IEC.

Before joining Cisco in 2005, Johnson led environmental affairs teams at Microsoft and Boeing. Over the past 25 years, he has managed environmental and public health projects ranging from solar cell research to cleaning up Superfund sites to bringing potable water to remote Guatemalan villages. He is a member of the International Electrotechnical Commission Committee on Environmental Standardization (IEC TC 111), past Chair of the iNEMI Environmentally Conscious Electronics Committee, and former regional director of the American Waste Management Association.

Johnson is a graduate of Cornell University, and the University of Washington School of Public Health. He is a registered professional engineer.
