Palos Verdes Landfill Five-Year Review of Systems and Procedures that Control Landfill Gas and Chemicals

The Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) is currently conducting the first five-year review of environmental control systems in place at the Palos Verdes Landfill. DTSC is holding an open house and community town hall meeting to explain how the review process works and to explain the types of control systems in use. The review is taking place to ensure that systems currently in place are effective in protecting human health and the environment. This is your opportunity to talk to DTSC staff about the operation at the landfill. The review will be undertaken every five years. Please note that this open house and meeting does not cover development issues related to the proposed golf course project.
