SOIL GAS SAMPLING ACTIVITIES

Former Turco Products Facility 24700 South Main Street, Carson, California

Soil gas sampling fieldwork activities related to the ongoing environmental investigation of the former Turco Products facility are scheduled to begin on August 27, 2007. These activities are expected to continue through September 7, 2007.

The Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) and ERM-West, Inc. (ERM), the consulting firm for the owner of the former Turco property (Pedro First LLC), will be collecting soil gas samples in the flood channel area immediately to the east of the property. Soil gas forms in the soil when chemicals in the soil evaporate. Fieldwork activities will consist of taking samples in the subsurface soil to determine the concentration of potential volatile organic compounds (VOCs). The results from the soil gas analysis will be used to further evaluate the extent of soil gas migration, and will be used to determine the location of additional soil gas samples, if necessary.

The fieldwork within the flood channel will be conducted from approximately 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Efforts will be taken to minimize noise from the outdoor sampling activities. The DTSC, a state regulatory agency, will continue to oversee the work being conducted by Pedro First LLC and ERM and will inform the local community of the findings.

Additional fieldwork being conducted within the former Turco facility includes the collection of indoor air samples from inside the building at the Site as well as additional soil gas, soil, and groundwater samples to determine the concentrations of potential VOCs at the facility. However, these activities will be contained within the facility's perimeter fencing and privacy walls on the east and south sides of the property and surrounding properties will not be affected.
